Economic historians and sociologists have long recognized the value of account books, whether kept by an individual or by a store. For in such accounts may be traced the fluctuations of prices and the changing needs and dreams of the consumer. But all too frequently the genealogist has neglected this source of information.

For the state of New Jersey, every scrap of written evidence prior to 1830 is essential because of the loss of census records and the destruction of so many early records during the Revolution and by subsequent fires and neglect. Hence journals, ledgers, and daybooks that indicate the presence of certain individuals in a particular locality at a definite time are very valuable. Nor is this usefulness limited to the pre-1830 period; for many families moved about during a decade, and these peregrinations are not reflected in the census.

One of the most valuable sets of account books, from a genealogical standpoint, is that kept by Jacob Janeway from 1735 to 1746 for a store in East New Jersey. William Edmundson examined these books in 1896 and found them of "value for future genealogists and historians." The owner, Mr. Henry L. Janeway, is pleased to place them in the Rutgers University Library. Having found on cursory examination of these books that certain persons supposed to have come to this country in 1709 were old inhabitants of Somerset County in 1735, and realizing the wealth of similar information in them, the present contributor determined to compile a genealogical summary of Janeway's account books.

The pioneer storekeeper in a rapidly expanding though fairly sparsely settled community needed to keep track of those of his customers to whom he extended credit. Janeway achieved this end in several ways, each of which is valuable to the genealogist. In many instances he recorded the area in which the person lived, often with

ECONOMIC historians and sociologists have long recognized the value of account books, whether kept by an individual or by a store. For in such records can be traced the fluctuations of prices and the changing needs and desires of the consumer. But all too frequently the genealogist has neglected this source of information.

For the state of New Jersey, every scrap of written evidence prior to 1830 is essential because of the lack of census records and the destruction of so many early records during the Revolution and by subsequent fires and neglect. Hence journals, ledgers, and daybooks that indicate the presence of certain individuals in a particular locality at a definite time are very valuable. Nor is this usefulness limited to the pre-1830 period; for many families moved about during a decade, and these peregrinations are not reflected in the census.

One of the most valuable sets of account books, from a genealogical standpoint, is that kept by Jacob Janeway from 1735 to 1746 for a store in East New Jersey. When John Bodine Thompson examined these books in 1896 he was so impressed by their "value for future genealogists and historians" that he persuaded their owner, Mr. Henry L. Janeway, to place them in the Rutgers University Library. Having found on cursory examination of these books that certain persons supposed to have come to this country in 1749 were old inhabitants of Somerset County in 1735, and realizing the wealth of similar information in them, the present contributor determined to compile a genealogical summary of Janeway's account books.

The pioneer storekeeper in a rapidly expanding though fairly sparsely settled community needed to keep track of those of his customers to whom he extended credit. Janeway achieved this end in several ways, each of which is valuable to the genealogist. In many instances he recorded the area in which the person lived, often with a notation concerning a near neighbor; in many other cases he identified the customer by occupation, or by relationship to someone already known to him. And since neighbors, friends, and relatives often picked up items at the store for the customers, he kept close account of the persons who delivered the goods, undoubtedly so that he could establish his charges if they were disputed. Since the deliverer would most likely be someone who lived near the person for whom he made the purchase, or who passed the residence of that person on his or her trip to the store, a further clue is inherent in these entries.

Two limitations of such records are apparent. Since they show only charge accounts, the names of those who paid cash or bartered directly for what they purchased will appear only incidentally if at all. Any specialist in Somerset and Hunterdon County research for the period could think of several prominent citizens who must certainly have patronized the Janeway and Broughton establishment, but whose names are absent from the records or occur only in references concerning the residence of a customer or a family relationship. Also, persons well known to Janeway by 1735 are not identified, except as those of identical name might be confused.

Concerning the location of the store there has been some conjecture. Henry L. Janeway supposed it to have been at Middlebrook; and John Bodine Thompson, largely because of some of the names he recognized and because the Janeway family had originally come from Burnt Mills, Hertfordshire, had "no doubt that the locality was the Burnt Mills on the North Branch of the Raritan, still known by that name, which has never been known to tradition as destroyed by fire." However, a newspaper advertisement of 1747, reprinted in NJA 12:339, described it as "adjoining to Rariton road, which leads from Well's Ferry to Rariton landing, seven miles from said landing, and nine miles from New-Brunswick," and the store as "having been kept there upwards of twenty years." It would seem, therefore, that the store was located in what was later the town of Bridgewater and is today Bound Brook—a favorable spot, as even the early maps show there a major crossroads, making it readily accessible to practically all of the localities mentioned in the records.

Thankful as we are for such a rich source of information, we can still lament the loss of the records for the early days of the store. For the period from 16 July 1735 to 11 December 1737 there remains a journal, fully bound, but starting with page 479. Internal evidence indicates that this business was conducted as a partnership by John Broughton and Jacob Janeway, all entries after 11 December 1737 being purely financial: settlement of accounts and division of assets, with the last few pages dated merely "1745." From 12 December 1737, Jacob Janeway seems to have conducted the store as a sole proprietorship. For the period from that date to 25 February 1746 there are both a journal and a ledger, with each furnishing evidence supplementary to that of the other. The cross references between these books have been especially helpful in separating persons of the same name (as the John Bodines) and in verifying certain variants of surnames (such as Rockhill-Ruckle, Butner-Potner, Shoass-Sheep). Though others are suspected, only variants thus identified are grouped together in the following list.

And now a few words concerning the list as printed here. Certain conventions have been adopted to save space and others have been kept from the original. No attempt has been made to preserve a consistency that would have been inconsistent with the original, this being particularly true of the spelling of names; but certain abbreviations involving the use of superscript letters have been spelled out.

The order of presentation is: surname (with variants in parenthesis), given name, earliest and latest dates found, with a dash between if there are three or more entries, but a comma if only two. If the person apparently had no account, a colon has been placed between the date and the supplementary items. Identifications by occupation, place of residence, neighbors, or family relations follow, with nr before a name indicating that the subject lived near that person on his first appearance in the record or at the time specified, nr after a name indicating that such person, at a later date, was identified as living near the subject. Delivery of goods to or for the subject is indicated by d; and d to indicates that the subject delivered goods to or for the person or persons named, such persons probably being neighbors. Deliveries to or by a member of the family whose relationship is established in the record have been omitted.

Before each year in the list is to be read 17, as all dates are between 1735 and 1747; the convention of using an apostrophe before such abbreviations was discarded as offensive to the eye and pedantic. The records were kept under the old style: i.e., with the year starting on 25 March. Consequently, all January and February dates would be one year later under the present system. To avoid confusion, March dates are indicated by the familiar double-year method (e.g., Mch 35/6), although Janeway did not use it. The day of the month has been omitted in all but a few cases both to conserve space and because the same item often appears in the ledger and the journal under different dates and even the journal date appears to be that of the transfer from a memorandum daybook rather than that of the transaction.

The compiler has resisted the temptation to editorialize or interpret. Consequently even family relationships, occupations, and residences well known to genealogists are not mentioned unless recorded in the account books themselves.
